
Contributors

Magdolna Balkányi retired in 2013 from her position as associate professor of German studies at the University of Debrecen (Hungary), where she taught German culture, modern literature and theatre. Her fields of research and publication include: history of modern German drama and theatre, comparative studies in German and Hungarian literature and theatre, theory of translation of drama. She is a member of various Hungarian and international organisations, including the Society of German Theatre Studies (Gesellschaft für Theaterwissenschaft) since 1994, and since 2005, is head of the Hungarian research section of STEP international research group.

balkanyi@gmail.com

Mathias P. Bremgartner is a PhD candidate in theatre studies at the University of Bern (Switzerland), where he also worked as an assistant lecturer from 2009 to 2014. Having studied in Bern, Zurich and Berlin, he holds an MA in theatre studies, modern history and film studies. His primary research interests are in the interplay of theatre and media and the functioning of theatre systems. In addition to his academic activities, Bremgartner also works as a freelance dramaturg and production manager for Swiss fringe theatre companies.

mathias.bremgartner@itw.unibe.ch

Joshua Edelman is senior lecturer in theatre at Manchester Metropolitan University (UK). He serves as co-convenor of the Performance and Religion working group of the International Federation for Theatre Research. He is co-editor of Performing Religion in Public (Palgrave, 2013), and his articles have appeared in journals including Performance Research, Nordic Theatre Studies, Ecumenica and Liturgy. With Quirijn van den Hoogen and Louise Hansen, he has co-written a monograph on the problem of theatrical autonomy, forthcoming from Amsterdam University Press.

joshedelman@gmail.com

Frank Gerber has studied political economics, theatre science and musicology at the universities of Basel and Bern (Switzerland). He has worked for the University of Bern (Institut für Theaterwissenschaft) and as a critic for various newspapers. After some time as a director at UBS Bank, he now teaches in primary school.

frank.m.gerber@bluewin.ch

Louise Ejgod Hansen is associate professor at the School of Communication and Culture at Aarhus University (Denmark). Her main research areas are theatre policy, cultural policy, theatre institutions and qualitative audience research. She is currently research and project manager of rethinkIMFACTS 2017, a joint project of Aarhus University and Aarhus 2017 evaluating Aarhus as European Capital of Culture 2017 with a range of research activities.

drleh@hum.au.dk

Kathrine Hansen Kihm and Kirstine Lilleøre Christensen are MA students of dramaturgy at the School of Communication and Culture, Aarhus University (Denmark).

kirstine104@hotmail.com, kathrine@kihm.dk

Andreas Kotte is professor of theatre studies and, since 1992, head of the Institute of Theatre Studies (ITW) at the University of Bern (Switzerland). He received training in construction engineering and theatre illumination. He studied theatre studies, culture studies and aesthetics at Humboldt University in Berlin. His fields of expertise are theatre history, theatre theory and dramaturgy.

andreas.kotte@itw.unibe.ch

Anneli Saro is professor of theatre research at the University of Tartu (Estonia) and the editor-in-chief of the journal Nordic Theatre Studies. She is a member of the executive committee of the International Federation for Theatre Research and a convener of the Theatrical Event working group. She has published articles on audience research, performance analysis, Estonian theatre history and systems.

anneli.saro@ut.ee

Beate Schappach has been working as a research assistant and lecturer at the Institute of Theatre Studies, University of Bern (Switzerland) since 2002. She studied theatre and German literature at Freie Universität Berlin and at the universities of Zürich and Bern. In 2011, she finished her PhD and is currently working on her habilitation project Dramaturgy. The Art of Tidying Up. She is president of the Swiss Society for Cultural Studies and convener of its working group Literature-Medicine-Gender. She has also worked as a dramaturg for theatre productions in Germany and Switzerland and curated several exhibitions.

beate.schappach@itw.unibe.ch

Attila Szabó is a deputy director of the Hungarian Theatre Museum and Institute, Budapest. He was the Hungarian project coordinator and researcher of several international research projects on theatre architecture (TACE), the European Collected Library of Artistic Performance (ECLAP) and Performing Arts Centre Europe (PACE.V4). His main research field is: contemporary Central European theatre, theatre and “Coming to Terms with the Past”, social and documentary theatre, performance reconstruction, theatre sociology, intersubjectivity and conversation.

szaboate@gmail.com

Maja Šorli works as a researcher at the Academy of Theatre, Radio, Film and Television, University of Ljubljana (AGRFT UL, Slovenia). She also works as a dramaturg, author of texts, teacher and creator in new media. She received her PhD from AGRFT UL in 2011. In 2014, her monograph Slovenska postdramska pomlad [The Slovenian Postdramatic Spring] was published by City Theatre Ljubljana (MGL) in its series MGL Library. She is a member of the STEP international research group as well as of the Association of Theatre Critics and Researchers of Slovenia. She is also editor-in-chief of Amfiteater: Journal of Performing Arts Theory.

maja.sorli1@guest.arnes.si

Hedi-Liis Toome is a PhD student of theatre research at the Institute of Cultural Research and Fine Arts at the University of Tartu (Estonia). In her PhD, she studies the functioning of theatre using the city of Tartu as an example. She has been a member of the STEP international research group since 2010.

hediliis@gmail.com

Hans van Maanen is a former dramaturg who retired as professor of arts & society and theatre studies at the University of Groningen (Netherlands) in 2011. He has served as vice-chair and general executive of the Fund for the Stage Arts of the Netherlands and a member of the executive committee of the International Federation for Theatre Research. Since 2011, he chairs the Arts Council Groningen. Among his publications are: Theatre Worlds in Motion: Structures, Politics and Developments in the Countries of Western Europe (ed. with S.E. Wilmer, Amsterdam-Atlanta: Rodopi, 1998) and How to Study Artworlds. On the Societal Organization of Aesthetic Experience (Amsterdam: AUP, 2009) .

j.j.van.maanen@rug.nl

Quirijn van den Hoogen teaches art sociology and arts policy at the University of Groningen (Netherlands). He is a member of the STEP international research group and the Research Centre for Arts in Society. His research interests include theatre politics, the evaluation of (local) cultural policies and the effects of cultural participation.

q.l.van.den.hoogen@rug.nl

Marline Lisette Wilders received her PhD from the University of Groningen (Netherlands). Wilders has lectured in the Department for Arts, Culture and Media, University of Groningen, and in the Cultural Studies programme, University of Amsterdam as an assistant professor. She has also worked for several years as a consultant in the field of architecture. Currently Wilders is affiliated with the Interuniversity Department of Regional and Urban Studies and Planning of the Politecnico of Turin.

m.l.wilders@uva.nl

Ksenija Repina Kramberger studied dramaturgy at the Academy of Theatre, Radio, Film and Television, University of Ljubljana (AGRFT UL, Slovenia). She received two Student Prešeren Awards: one for her undergraduate work in 2006 and one for her degree thesis in 2008. Since 2004, she has been collaborating with the Maribor Theatre Festival (publications editor, panel discussion/book presentation facilitator). Between 2012 and 2014, she was the regional selector for children's theatre at the Republic of Slovenia Public Fund for Cultural Activities. In 2013, she was a jury member in the tender for new puppet theatre plays at the Puppet Theatre Maribor.

ksenija.repina@gmail.com

Natalie Querol is a theatre producer based in Newcastle upon Tyne (United Kingdom). She is director of the theatre development agency The Empty Space, through which she supports emerging and mid-career artists and initiates projects designed to create conditions in which artists are able to fulfil their full potential. She specialises in visual theatre, having previously been director of the Puppet Centre Trust. She is a judge of the Total Theatre Awards.

www.theemptyspace.org.uk

Antine Zijlstra is a PhD Candidate in the field of theatre studies and arts marketing at the University of Groningen (Netherlands). She focuses on qualitative research on the values of theatre attendance as part of the STEP international research group and has worked on research commissioned by arts organisations and government. She taught arts marketing in the Department for Arts, Culture and Media at the Institute of Humanities (University of Groningen). She currently works as project manager of research at the Department of Art and Education at the NHL Leeuwarden.

a.t.zijlstra@rug.nl